

In Signo Leonis

Vineyards: Heribert Bayer is a “Negoiciant”. He has been a consultant do many of the top producers in Burgenland and now is able to source from of the best vineyards in Mittelburgenland

Varieties: Principally Blaufränkisch. Blaufränkisch is the variety that started off the red wine boom. Despite its origin still being relatively unknown, it is particularly significant that this variety has acquired such critical acclaim in both Austria and abroad.

Wine Region Mittelburgenland: Mittelburgenland 2,117 hectares (5,230 acres) The four main wine villages, Deutschkreutz, Horitschon, Lutzmannsburg, and Neckenmarkt, as well as two very modern co-operative wineries, support the view that large-scale production and high quality is possible.

Wine Village Siegraben: The center of red wine culture in Austria lies just outside of Siegraben, south of Lake Neusiedl and close to the Hungarian border. The dense forests surrounding the vineyards might not give the impression that the climate conditions of the Neusiedlersee regions have an influence here, but they do. It was only during the end of the 1970’s and early 1980’s that this region began producing red wines with regional character.

Production: The negociant eleveurs – Patrick and Heribert Bayer. Like father like son. They share the same passion: to create excellent wines; the variety, origin, terroir, vintages, alongside their personal signature with uncompromising quality. As negociants they do not own any vineyards, however, through long-standing relationships with landowners and a great understanding of individual vineyards, they produce impressive and exemplary wines where the expressiveness and typicity of the grape varieties excel.

The cellar, In Signo Leonis, is an implementation of Heribert Bayer’s great wine passion. Educated as an oenologist, he began to deepen his knowledge in the late 1970’s by studying documents from Californian and Italian universities on his own. Between 1985 and 1991, he consulted for some now-famous Austrian wineries. In 1997, Heribert found his home in the hills of Neckenmarkt and his goal became to produce typical Mittelburgenland Blaufränkisch wines. In 2002, he built the present day winery and his son Patrick decided to join him in the business. They produced the first vintage of In Signo Sagittarli, a Blaufränkisch at its finest. In 2006, Patrick took over the winery; with his father Heribert beside him they produce outstanding wines together.
